Rhythmic Gymnastics

The Rhythmic Gymnastics Group Final was a beautiful conclusion to a very strong competition, which saw Russia winning its third Olympic Gold medal (35.550) and China breaking into the club of the medal winning nations with the Silver (35.225). The leaders in the Qualification round, Belarus, had to settle for the Bronze (34.900).

He Wenna (CHN) produced the highest, most stylish, and very difficult routine to win the Women's Trampoline Final. Karen Cockburn (CAN) became the first and only competitor to have taken medals in all three Olympic events in Trampoline: Bronze in Sydney 2000, Silver in Athens 2004, and Silver in Beijing 2008. Fourth in Sydney in 2000 and disappointed in Athens where she failed to reach the Final, Elena Khilko (UZB) finally celebrated an Olympic Bronze.

Millions of Gymnasts Have Long Awaited This Day A Competition for All!

BEIJING (CHN), August 22, 2008: The FIG is organising a run of competitions open to men and women of all ages for the first time in its long history; the event falls under the Gym for Life Challenge. Much more than a revolution, the "Challenge" is a fabulous illustration of the Federation's progressive mindset and its intention to expand the discipline that has underpinned all FIG activity since 1881.

The 2009 first Challenge will be held in Dornbirn (AUT) in July at the venue that housed the 2007 World Gymnaestrada.
